DOURIEAN FLETCHER: JEWELRY OF THE AFROFUTURE

MUSEUM OF ARTS AND DESIGN

The Messengers are beings who have come to this planet to remind us of the innate gifts we carry and have come here to share. They remind us to have faith in our gifts, to recognize the spiritual favor that supports us, and to navigate life with love, power, and vision. Through life's peaks and valleys, trials, and turbulent waters, the Messengers remind us that the elements we need to navigate our unique journeys are already within us. Their presence is an invitation to remember who we are, trust what we carry, and remain connected to the gifts we have come here to share.

The Messengers is a body of work exploring adornment as a language of identity, memory, and human experience. Through sculptural jewelry and photographic imagery, Dourean Fletcher creates a visual dialogue between the body, the objects it carries, and the stories they communicate.

Developed through intuitive metalsmithing, artistic direction, and a deeply personal engagement with adornment, the collection brings physical objects and photographic narratives into conversation. The jewelry becomes more than an object worn on the body. Within the photographic works, it participates in a larger expression of presence, symbolism, and possibility.

Together, the sculptural and photographic works form an interconnected artistic vision, inviting collectors to encounter each object and image individually while considering the larger narrative of the collection.

The Messengers

Limited-Edition Photographic Works

The Messengers is a photographic series conceived and artistically directed by Douriean Fletcher in collaboration with photographer BJ the Photographer. Through sculptural adornment, styling, hair, and the human form, the images personify four guiding forces: Faith, Spiritual Favor, Love, and Power.

Each photographic work exists independently as a collectible artwork while remaining part of the larger sculptural and visual language of The Messengers.

THE MESSENGERS: SCULPTURAL ADORNMENT

Each work in this collection is conceived as a wearable sculpture — adornment as artistic expression, where the object becomes a physical presence and a vessel for meaning. Presented in dialogue with the photographic narratives of The Messengers, the works embody the relationship between the object, the body, and the stories we carry.

The Collector's Companion Print

Where a corresponding photographic work exists, the acquisition of a sculptural work includes a companion print documenting its place within the visual narrative of The Messengers. The companion print is distinct from the independently collectible, limited-edition photographic works.
